SAVOY
HOTEL SELECTIONS

The main building of the Hotel was constructed in 1829 as a school for European children in the Nilgiris. As in the case of the building of St. Stephens Church the massive beams came from Tipu Sultan's Palace at Srirangapattanam. These beams were dragged all the way from Srirangapattanam up the Singhur Ghat by Elephants.

THE SAGA OF TEA AT HILGIRIS

Nilgiri tea was grown in the Blue Mountains which was part of the Western Ghats mountain range which stretches across South India. They are some of the highest growth tea in the world up to 8000' elevation. And Nilgiri is one of the most beautiful tea regions in the world.

Nilgiri tea was one of the great colonial-era products of the world and was one of the greatest beverages. They are known for being very aromatic and well-suited for drinking with milk, and today used in a variety of cuisines around the world. The tea was first brought to Nilgiri in 1825 and has been a major export of the region since the 1870s. Therefore, many of the established tea estates have that old British colonial look and feel to them.

Gastronomy-Anglo Indian Cuisine

Among all European traders Nilgiris saw, British stayed the longest; their influence was naturally even deeper. When it came to food, we managed to strike a good barter too. They got us breads and we introduced them to an array of spices. The Anglo-Indian cuisine, thus, became a mishmash of both the worlds and it is the delicious result of the British Raj in India. Indian Khansamas (cooks) took aspects of British cuisine and amalgamated them with Indian methods of cooking, spices, ingredients to create this delectable fare.

ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH

A breathtaking architectural marvel built in the colonial times. The structure dates back to 1829 and was built by the British government. The date of the commencement of construction was cleverly chosen to coincide with the birthday of King George IV.

The fabulous pale-yellow building of the St Stephen's Church bears testimony to the geniuses of British architecture that existed during those times. This grandeur is also reflected in the painting of 'The Last Supper' that can be found in the Church.

Various attractions that appeal to visitors and tourists in the church include pretty stained glass windows that depict a myriad of different scenes, such as Mother Mary holding Jesus in her arms.
